Alexandria Gazette

TUESDAY EVENING, AUGUST 13, 1873.

A VERY PRETTY STORY.—A friend who was at the Saracine last summer has just related to me the romance of Prince Battenberg, the new sovereign of Bulgaria, and the pretty, charming daughter of Bismarck, the great Italian actress—the young Mischaena Carcano del Grillo. These two young persons met at St. Mauritz in the spring, last summer, before he had come to his native kingdom, and the two charmed you all with their flowing Northern spirit to the British legation early the Morning, soon and always they stayed together, the former with her fascinating and fashion-able mount, the latter,

So devoted was the young Prince, so evidently like himself, "many fathoms deep in love," that "Society" was looking on, expected daily to hear the engagement announced. But he lived and he rode away without saying a word, for the imperial uncle had other intentions for him, and a sovereign of Bulgaria cannot marry for love even if the girl be charming as is the Marchioness del Grillo. The young Prince will not repeat in life the romance of his father and mother, who married "all for love and the world well lost." His mother was sum- mily rebuked by the Empress of Russia, who said, "I do not like the alliance of the Empire with the Emperor Nicholas to accomplish my master's designs; make two loves hap- py."—Romanus to Philippe Telegraph.
